

I am in favor of eliminating all CW testing requirements as many other countries have already decided to do. This proposal would eliminate element 1 so I do support it. If we test for proficiency in an outdated mode like Morse code why don't we test for proficiency in vacuum tube circuitry also? We need more amateur radio operators; this will allow many excellent people who would have otherwise become hams (if there were no testing requirement for an archaic mode).

Phil Covington
N8VB